Don't Blame The Sugar If Your Jelly Doesn't Jell

So many people have the mistaken notion that it is the sugar that makes the jelly jell, but if they would stop long enough to reason a little they would see it isn't the sugar, but the "pectin" in certain fruits that causes the juices to jell.

Some fruits you cannot make jelly from, because there is not sufficient "pectin" in them to cause the juices to jell. Quinces, grapes, apples, currants, etc. are fruits which contain the greatest amount of "pectin" but to insure jelly success with even these fruits, they must not be too ripe, and should be freshly picked.

If you observe this, and use Utah-Idaho Sugar there is no excuse for jelly failures.
